

PEACE PALACE, LIBRARY AND ACADEMY, THE HAGUE

Public and Government

Peace Palace, Library and Academy, The Hague, New Building
Competition 1st Prize Start of Planning 2003 Construction period 2003-2007 Location Carnegieplein 2, 2517KJ The Hague GFA ca. 7.600 m²
Scope 1-5, Parts of 8 Client Carnegie Foundation Costs 25 Mio €
Award Europäischer Architekturpreis „Metalldächer und Metall-fassaden“, 2008

Ground Plan, ground floor

Peace Palace, Library and Academy

The new building is a major expansion of the Peace Palace Library and the creation of new facilities for the Hague Academy of International Law. Both activities are given their own individual identity within a balanced dynamic, architectural composition comprising of three formal elements- a triangular Reading Room, an elliptical Academy Hall and a linear building containing the foyer, offices and support spaces. The expansion has its own unique personality but is respectful of the Palace in scale, material and colour. The Academy Hall is a flexible room which accommodates various conference layouts: A Seminar Room, translator booths and the Academy offices are situated on the first floor of the main building. The Reading Room is the focus of the Library and forms a link to the Palace. An elegant three-storey foyer connecting the Entrance, Library and Academy contains facilities for business and informal discussion. Visual connections with upper levels encourage a sense of community amongst users and visitors, sharing a common interest in international peace and justice.